Key points:

- Managing international disaster assistance is becoming increasingly complex.
- Solid domestic law, rules and procedures are needed.
- This model is a reference tool for officials and lawmakers who wish to develop their own laws, rules or procedures.

Introduction

The “Model Act for the Facilitation and Regulation of International Disaster Relief and Initial Recovery Assistance” is intended as a reference tool for voluntary use by disaster management officials and/or legislators who wish to develop domestic legislation, regulation, and/or procedures in their countries for managing potential future international disaster assistance.

Why should they want to do this? Simply put, global experience has shown that managing international assistance operations is becoming increasingly complex. The absence of a specific domestic regulatory framework can make it very difficult for an affected state to properly oversee, regulate and facilitate the entry of life-saving relief. Ad hoc approaches, hastily devised in the wake of a catastrophic disaster, have often led to a loss of state control and the arrival of inappropriate or poor quality relief. They also frequently result in unnecessary restrictions, delays and expenses hampering the right aid, just when it is most urgently needed.<sup>1</sup>

Unfortunately, very few governments have comprehensive rules or procedures in place related to international disaster assistance, notwithstanding the common experience of regulatory problems. This model draws on elements that do already exist in domestic laws of countries from various regions and is designed as a concept for a functioning system of oversight and facilitation.

Origins of the Model Act

In November 2007, the 30th International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent (gathering the state parties to the Geneva Conventions and the components of the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement) adopted the Guidelines for the Domestic Facilitation of International Disaster Relief and Initial Recovery Assistance (also known as “the IDRL Guidelines”).<sup>2</sup> The IDRL Guidelines are a set of recommendations to governments on how to prepare their disaster laws and procedures for the common regulatory problems in international disaster relief operations. The IDRL Guidelines were based on seven years of country case studies, legal research, and consultations with governments and relief specialists, carried out by the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (IFRC).

<sup>1</sup> For a comprehensive summary of several dozen case studies looking at these types of problems around the world, see IFRC, Law and Legal Issues in International Disaster Response (2007), available at www.ifrc.org/dl.

<sup>2</sup> Available in multiple languages at www.ifrc.org/dl. The term “IDRL” refers to “International Disaster Response Laws, Rules and Principles.”

Key points:

- The Model Act is based on internationally-accepted guidelines.
- It responds to requests for sample legislative language.
- It has benefitted from the input of numerous experts.

Starting in 2008, and annually thereafter, the UN General Assembly has adopted resolutions encouraging states to make use of the IDRL Guidelines.<sup>3</sup> Similar resolutions have been adopted by the World Customs Organization,<sup>4</sup> and various regional bodies, including the Organization of American States,<sup>5</sup> and the Pacific Island Forum<sup>6</sup> and reference to them has been included in the African Union's draft Disaster Management Policy.

Since the approval of the IDRL Guidelines, the IFRC and its members have provided technical assistance to governments in 25 countries to implement them. As of the date of this document, eleven states had developed new laws or regulations drawing on the IDRL Guidelines and approximately a dozen others were considering draft bills. In the course of these technical assistance projects, governmental officials have frequently requested model legislative language to assist them in implementing the IDRL Guidelines in their domestic law and procedures.

In response to these requests, the IFRC partnered with the UN Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA) and the Inter-Parliamentary Union (IPU) in 2009 to begin work on this Model Act. The project partners benefited from expert assistance from a number of international law firms and institutions, including Allen & Overy LLP, Baker & McKenzie, CMS, Cameron McKenna LLP, the legal department of Microsoft Corporation, and the World Customs Organization. On a pro bono basis, experts from these agencies undertook extensive background research on existing law in countries around the world and provided advice on drafting. A series of expert meetings were also convened in Geneva, Oxford and Kuala Lumpur to provide feedback and advice on earlier drafts.

In 2011, a pilot version of this Model Act was launched on the occasion of the 31st International Conference of the Red Cross and Red Crescent. In its Resolution 7, the participants of the International Conference (the state parties to the Geneva Conventions and the components of the Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement) welcomed the efforts of the project partners to develop the Model Act and invited "further consultation with states and other stakeholders on the use of the model act as a reference tool."<sup>7</sup> To facilitate further state involvement, a formal request for additional comments was circulated to all permanent missions in Geneva in December of 2011, and a side event was organized at the Economic and Social Council in New York in June 2012. Additional consultation meetings were also held in Africa, Asia-Pacific and the Americas as well as a final experts meeting in Geneva. Recognizing the progress of this work, in December 2012, UN General Assembly Resolution 67/87 also welcomed the efforts of the project partners to develop the model act.

<sup>7</sup> Resolution 7, Strengthening normative frameworks and addressing regulatory barriers concerning disaster mitigation, response and recovery, 31C/11/R7 (November 2011).

In all, the Model Act benefitted from the advice and suggestions of over 200 experts from around the world, including senior officials from governments, National Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies, UN agencies and NGOs, legislative drafters, members of parliament, regional organizations and academia. It has also been “field tested” in country-based technical assistance projects carried about by National Societies and the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies (IFRC) in 2012.

Key points:

- The Model Act seeks to limit delays, restrictions and costs while ensuring adequate oversight.
- It calls for certain legal facilities to be provided to chosen international providers.
- It requires those providers to abide by clear standards.

Purposes of the Model Act

Like the IDRL Guidelines, this Model Act is intended to help states to be prepared for the most common legal and regulatory issues that arise in major international disaster operations. These issues relate to the entry and operation of assisting international actors, and also to the coordination of their assistance, especially in the relief and initial recovery period.

Issues in legal entry and operation often include:

- Delays in the entry of international humanitarian personnel, goods and equipment due to the requirements of customs and immigration laws which are not adapted to a situation of urgency;
- Imposition of duties, tolls and taxes on relief items and activities;
- Problems granting legal recognition of foreign qualifications for specialised professional personnel;
- Difficulties in granting legal recognition for foreign humanitarian organizations, which mean they may not be able to open bank accounts, hire local staff, lease premises, or other legal actions necessary for efficient in-country assistance.

Issues in the quality and coordination of international relief may include:

- Importation of unnecessary or inappropriate relief items;
- Failure to coordinate with domestic authorities and other relief providers;
- Use of inadequately trained personnel;
- Failure to consult with beneficiaries;
- Culturally unacceptable behaviour;

- Proselytizing.

Issues in transit of relief goods to another state affected by disaster may include:

- Delays in the entry and exit of international humanitarian personnel, goods and equipment destined for the other state;
- Imposition of duties, tolls and taxes on relief items in transit to the other state.

Key points:

- This Model can and should be adjusted to the circumstances of each country.
- A stand-alone act may not be the right solution in every country – this Model may also be used as inspiration for “cut and paste” amendments to various existing acts, or for regulations or procedures.
- This Model assumes that there is already a law on domestic disaster management .

Uses of the Model Act

Given the diversity of legal systems around the globe, and especially the different domestic approaches to disaster management, it is well understood that not every clause in this model will be equally relevant to each country. In every case, the text will need to be adapted to local circumstances. Moreover, in some countries, it may not be possible or desirable to adopt a single stand-alone act embracing all of the topics included in this model.

In these cases, various portions of the model language suggested here might rather be used as inspiration for amendments to other existing laws or rules, such as legislation or regulations concerning disaster management, immigration, customs, taxation, health, telecommunications or transport. Accordingly, side notes in this draft suggest the other key domestic legislation in which certain elements of the Model Act could be inserted. If such a “modular” approach is taken, however, it is recommended that certain key elements of the Model Act be kept together. In particular, it would be most useful that the regime for the approval and termination of which international actors will be eligible for special legal facilities be kept within one act, even if the details of the facilities they receive may be regulated under other laws (such as customs, or immigration).

It should also be noted that the Model Act does not set out a system for coordinating domestic disaster response. It assumes that such a system already exists under the disaster management legislation in the country enacting it. Accordingly, efforts have been made in drafting to avoid provisions overlapping with the usual content of domestic disaster management acts. Nevertheless, it is still quite possible that some provisions in this text will be found to be contradictory or overlapping with existing legislation in some countries. It is therefore important to examine existing laws and rules in each instance before using this Model to fashion anything new.

Drafting key

Drafter's note text boxes in the margin indicate how law-makers might use sections of this model language as individual amendments to various existing laws, if it makes better sense in their circumstances to do so rather than adopting the whole text as a single stand-alone act.

Bracketed text in the Model Act text refers to elements that might be particularly subject to differing approaches based on the specific circumstances and legal and institutional structures of the adopting country.

Italicized text within brackets is meant to be replaced with the appropriate domestic equivalent (for example, the name of the country or the name of the national disaster management agency, if one exists).

Text within brackets that is not italicized is either proposed as a choice between several options (for example, "President/Prime Minister," "district/province") or is an element considered to be especially subject to differing choices between countries (such as the precise length in time of certain deadlines).

Defined terms, as described in Article 3, are capitalized throughout the text for easy reference.

Drafting note

While this Model Act is presented as a stand-alone statute, it may be deemed more appropriate to use various elements as amendments to various laws, regulations or other instruments.

Marginal boxes like this one are included to suggest where various sections of this text might be placed if that is the case. They are not intended to be published into law as part of an act.

Chapter II      Initiation and Termination of International Disaster Assistance

Article 5      Assessment of the Need for International Disaster Assistance

a. Immediately after the onset of a major Disaster, and after consultation with relevant [provincial/district/state] and local authorities, the [relevant disaster management authority] shall make a determination, based on initial estimates of needs and damage, as to whether domestic capacities are likely to be sufficient to attend to the needs for Disaster Relief and Initial Recovery Assistance. This determination may also be made, at the discretion of the [relevant disaster management authority], prior to the onset of an imminent major Disaster.

b. In the event of a determination that domestic response capacities are not likely to be sufficient due to the scale of the Disaster, the [relevant disaster management authority] shall advise the [President/Prime Minister] and recommend that an immediate request be made for International Disaster Assistance.

c. If such a recommendation is made, the [relevant disaster management authority] shall, after consultation with relevant [provincial/district/ state] and local authorities, develop a preliminary list of Goods, Equipment and Services required. The [relevant disaster management authority] shall make this list available to potential Assisting International Actors immediately upon the commencement of an International Disaster Relief Period pursuant to Article 8. The list shall be updated as needed to reflect new information and changing circumstances.

Article 6      Requests for International Disaster Assistance

a. Upon the advice of the [relevant disaster management authority], the [President/Prime Minister] may make a request for International Disaster Assistance. b. The request shall be accompanied by:

- (i) information as to the extent and type of assistance required, based on the list prepared by the [relevant disaster management authority] pursuant to Article 5, unless gathering such information would lead to undue delay in issuing the request; and
- (ii) information on the procedures for Assisting International Actors to make offers or provide assistance pursuant to Article 7.

Article 7      Offers and Acceptance of International Assistance

- a. Except as otherwise provided in subsection (d), Assisting International Actors may provide International Disaster Assistance in [country name] only if they have made an offer that has been accepted pursuant to this Article.
- b. Assisting States and intergovernmental organizations [including the United Nations] interested in providing International Disaster Assistance shall direct offers to the Ministry of Foreign Affairs [through the appropriate [country name] embassy]. Offers should indicate, in general terms, the type, amount, means of delivery and estimated duration of assistance to be provided. The Ministry of Foreign Affairs shall then consult with the [relevant disaster management authority] about such offers.
